

Uri Ruttenburg

Video Production, Post-Production, Web Design

Uri's first film was a one-off print, created with an exacto knife and two nails. Since then, he has become an expert in graphic design, web site development, and interactive multimedia.

Uri formed the core of the web division at Inherent.com (a leading web services company). While there, he developed and maintained web sites for some of the country's largest law firms. His skills include editing and compressing video for Internet publication, Javascript, PHP, SMIL, Cold Fusion, and Flash.

On the side, Uri has patiently nurtured a talent for documentary filmmaking. He has recently produced a documentary film scheduled to air on Oregon's PBS affiliate.

Insight

My wife and I recently visited our alma mater. When we stopped by the local bakery we found the same old woman who had been behind the counter when we were in school. She said she'd been working in the store for thirty years now, selling whole-wheat donuts. When I gently asked her if she planned to retire, she told me that when you find something that you enjoy, there's no reason to quit just because people think you look old. "I'll feel old when people stop shopping in my store," she said and smiled as we paid for our lunch.
